'Motors Seller of the Year' announced by eBay Motors

eBayMotors.co.uk today announced that 'ukautosite' is its first ever 'Motors Seller of the Year', having sold over £4 million worth of cars on eBay Motors in the past year.

Out of all the Motors sellers on eBayMotors.co.uk (excluding car dealers), ukautosite not only sold the most cars but they also impressed the judges with their unique business model.

The company has a team of 35 staff, with its head office in Sussex and is currently growing its sales by ten percent month-on-month and is expecting even greater success for 2008.

Specialising in providing RAC inspected ex-fleet cars to the consumer, Carsite opened their ebay shop UKAutosite in 2003. Clients, such as The Bank of Scotland (who fund 1 in 10 vehicles on the road), use Carsite to manage the sale of their ex-fleet stock. Every car listed is HPI checked, and contains the report from the independent RAC inspection, giving an honest transparency to the cars description. They also have a separate website <http://www.carsite.co.uk>

Karen and Douglas Rotberg, founders of Carsite.co.uk, commented: "In addition to providing us with significantly more potential buyers than any other online site, eBay Motors is the most efficient by far for converting car sales. The eBay feedback system means the Motors' community can also read about our excellent customer service which is key to the success of our business."

Jody Ford of eBay Motors said: "The internet is transforming the motoring industry and ukautosite has grabbed this opportunity. The team is offering unprecedented levels of transparency with their sales so that car buyers feel confident they know exactly what they're getting, which is important for every buyer but especially important when you're spending thousands of pounds in one go on a car."
